

Once upon a time, there was a dragon that lived in a mountain. This dragon hoarded riches and everything everyone would ever imagine, from the material to the immaterial. One day, a knight, came to him, offering wishes, anything the dragon wanted, but the dragon laughs at him. "You? Grant me wishes? hahaha dumb human, don't you see I posses everything everyone could have ever wanted in this life?". Which the knight responded: "Maybe you do, but you lack someone to share these riches, what good does it do having all these material and immaterial things when you got no one to share it with?". The dragon, thinking, looked at the knight and said "You might be right... then I do desire someone to go on adventures, to see the wonders of the world.". The knight, chuckling, responded "Your wish be granted, here I have your companion." Said the knight pointing at himself. The dragon laugh, and accepted, and so the adventures of the dragon and the knight began.